Service Records

Records of men and women who died as a result of participation in the war are available via the Commonwealth War Graves Commission and most are named on War Memorials.

There are some records of prisoners of war, but records of survivors of the war are, in general, not publicly available.

Therefore there is no access to a formal list of names or numbers of Gatehouse people who served in World War II.

At the Welcome Home Party in 1946, it was announced that about 194 men and women from the Gatehouse area had served in the armed forces during the war. About a hundred of these attended the Welcome Home Dinner.

Another source for the names of serving soldiers came at the end of the war when the Galloway News published 2 photographs of wartime babies. These were children born to serving soldiers.

Some survivors told their stories through family members, and some families preferred not to discuss wartime.
